ORIGINS AND DEVELOPMENT OF THE ACADEMY OF THE SOCIAL SCIENCES

The Academy came into existence as a result of decisions of the Social Science Research Council of Australia at its Annual General Meeting on 11 November, 1970. The proposal that the Council change its name to Academy of the Social Sciences in Australia and that its members take the title of Fellows was approved by the Registrar of Companies and Incorporated Associations in the Australian Capital Territory on 7 July, 1971. Like the Council the Academy is a non-profit organisation, and its functions remain unchanged.

The former Council owed its origin to the initiative of a group of social scientists in 1942.¹ The archives of the Australian National Research Council, now in the National Library of Australia in Canberra, show that several social scientists who were members of the Committee on National Morale appointed by the Prime Minister, Mr. J. W. Curtin, took the first steps to set up a national body for research in the social sciences. They held informal talks with the Executive Committee of the Australian National Research Council on the possibility of its being the midwife for the new baby. This was a logical request since the A.N.R.C. had long been recognised as the national body for scientific research in Australia; unlike the Australian Academy of Science to which it gave place in 1954 it embraced the social as well as the natural sciences.²

As a result of these discussions the A.N.R.C. appointed a "Committee to Report" on the proposal, under the chairmanship of Professor R. C. Mills. The Committee met on 21 November, 1942 and prepared a report recommending the establishment of an Australian Social Science Council. It pointed to the need for stimulating and planning research, and to the existence of such bodies in other countries. As a result of this report, and further discussions early in 1943, it was agreed that the new body should begin as the Provisional Social Science Research Committee of the Australian National Research Council. By this time Professor Mills had been appointed Chairman of the Australian Universities Commission recently established by the Commonwealth Government. Although he accepted appointment to the Provisional Committee he no longer took a leading role. In April, 1943 the parent body invited fifteen social scientists to join the Committee and appointed Dr. K. S. Cunningham (Director of the Australian Council for Educational Research) as Chairman, with Professor E. R. Walker as Secretary. The Committee also had power to co-opt additional members. Subsequently Dr. Cunningham was elected as Chairman and the Committee worked under his leadership until it became an autonomous Council some nine years later.

The first meeting of the Provisional Committee was held in the headquarters of the Australian Council for Educational Research, Melbourne, on 31 August - 1 September, 1943. The terms of its charter provided that it could become an independent body on its own initiative by giving six months' notice; it was responsible for its own programme of activities and controlled its own membership. Its sole obligation to its parent body was to submit each year a report on its activities. In November, 1944 after consultation it was agreed to drop the adjective "provisional" from the title and to become a special committee of the Australian National Research Council.3

For the first few years the Social Science Research Committee had a somewhat precarious life since it had no assured financial resources. The initial meeting in August, 1943, and several subsequent meetings were made possible by a grant from the Australian Council for Educational Research from a sum of money which the Carnegie Corporation of New York had placed at its disposal for such purposes. This sum was exhausted by 1946. The Australian National Research Council also provided a small subsidy to meet clerical and administrative expenses. In 1947 the Minister for Post-War Reconstruction invited the Committee to act as the Unesco National Co-operating Body for the Social Sciences and this solved the problem of expenses for annual meetings. In spite of financial difficulties the Committee sponsored the publication of Australian Social Science Abstracts, eighteen numbers of which appeared between March 1946 and November 1954. The financial problems were not solved until 1953 from which date the Commonwealth Government provided an annual grant, primarily to meet administrative costs. In the same year the Carnegie Corporation of

New York awarded a grant of $8,000 a year for five years to support an approved research programme.

By 1951 there was a growing feeling that the time had come for the Committee to become an independent body. At the annual meeting in March 1951 a sub-committee was appointed to report on the question of re-defining the nature and functions of the Committee, and its relations with the Australian National Research Council. The next meeting in February 1952 resolved in favour of an autonomous Council, and set up a sub-committee to draft a constitution. Since this development had been contemplated from the outset the decision was accepted by the Australian National Research Council which in March 1952 also confirmed the appointment of Sir Douglas Copland as Chairman and Mr. W. D. Borrie as Secretary. The draft constitution was approved at a meeting on 21 August, 1952, and all members of the former Committee were invited to accept membership of the new Social Science Research Council of Australia. Its first meeting was held a year later on 13 August, 1953. The membership of the Council in May 1953 numbered forty-four.

For several years after it achieved its new status the Council operated without any redefinition of its functions and constitution. However, the grant of a royal charter to the Australian Academy of Science in 1954 was followed by proposals to set up either an Academy or a Council of the Humanities. This caused the Council in June 1955 to consider the matter of its own name and constitution. A committee under the chairmanship of Professor Julius Stone recommended in October 1955 that the Council "(a) should become an incorporated body; (b) should proceed by petition to seek a royal charter, and to request that existing members should be incorporated as Fellows; (c) after incorporation close attention should be given to the formation of a wider grade of Associate or Member; (d) that the adoption of the name of Academy might be considered in due course in the light of the establishment of the Australian Humanities Research Council and its possible association with the S.S.R.C." The Executive Committee agreed in principle with the first three proposals, and undertook to discuss the fourth with the founders of the new body being planned to represent scholars in the humanities.

As a result Council resolved in May 1956 that it "should seek incorporation under that body of Australian law most appropriate to the Council", and that "the question of seeking a royal charter should be considered at the first general meeting after incorporation”. In June 1957 the Council became an incorporated association under the law of the Australian Capital Territory. No action was taken at the annual general meeting in June 1958 to consider seeking a royal charter in accordance with the resolution of May 1956. The matter was either ignored or forgotten for another ten years, in short until the Australian Humanities Research Council announced its intention of seeking the status of an Academy by royal charter. As a result there was a revival of interest in the subject and this was further stimulated by the grant of a royal charter (June 1970) to the Australian Academy of the Humanities. On 11 November, 1970 Council adopted a recommendation of the Executive Committee that the name Social Science Research Council of Australia be changed to Academy of the Social Sciences in Australia and that its members take the title of Fellows. These proposals were approved by the Registrar of Companies and Incorporated Associations in the Australian Capital Territory on 7 July, 1971.

Functions of the Academy

As mentioned above the functions of the Academy remained unchanged when the new title was adopted. These functions were defined as below when incorporation was approved in June, 1957:

(i) to encourage the advancement of the social sciences in Australia;

(ii) to act as a co-ordinating group for the promotion of research and teaching in the social sciences;

(iii) to foster research and to subsidise the publication of studies in the social sciences;

(iv) to encourage and assist in the formation of other national associations or institutions for the promotion of the social sciences or any branch of them;

(v) to act as the Australian national member of international organisations connected with social sciences; and

(vi) to act as consultant and adviser in regard to the social sciences.

From 1961 the Rules of the Social Science Research Council were printed as a booklet, the last edition being printed in 1969. The Rules of the Academy of Social Sciences in Australia are available in cyclostyled form and a copy is sent to all Fellows upon their election to the Academy.
Financial Support and Activities

Since 1953 the Australian Government has provided an annual grant, which increased in the period 1959-1975 from £3,500 to $50,000. The purpose was to assist in meeting administrative expenses, the cost of travel for social scientists, subsidies to scholarly journals, and assistance for publication of monographs. By 1975-76, however, the effects of inflation were such that Academy subsidies had to be limited to the publication of monographs resulting from its own research projects.

Over the years 1953 to 1958 a grant of $40,000 from the Carnegie Corporation of New York made it possible to assist individual scholars to a much greater extent than before. It also enabled the Council itself to plan and finance major projects. The first of these, directed by Norman MacKenzie, resulted in the first comprehensive study of the place of women in our own society (Women in Australia, Cheshire, Melbourne, 1962). It was followed by an expert study of Taxation in Australia: Agenda for Reform (M.U.P. 1964) by R. I. Downing, H. W. Arndt, A. H. Boxer and R. L. Mathews. The study of Aborigines in Australian Society began in 1964 with C. D. Rowley as director, the bulk of the cost ($105,000) being met by the Myer Foundation ($68,000) and the Sidney Myer Trust ($10,000). This project was completed with publication of the thirteenth and final volume of the series in early 1976.

As the Aborigines Project neared its conclusion it was decided (November, 1966) that the next major project should be a study of Immigrants in Australia. For this study the main sponsor was the Commonwealth Department of Immigration ($50,000), but good support has also come from the Australian Research Grants Committee, the Reserve Bank of Australia, the Broken Hill Proprietary Company and some of the major oil companies. The Academy has been one of the chief contributors. Two honorary directors were appointed – Professor R. T. Appleyard and Dr. C. A. Price.

As the emphasis in this project passed from research to publication, the Academy was asked by the Immigration Advisory Council’s Committee on Migrant Children to undertake further research into the educational problems facing these children. It also joined with the Australian Academy of Science and the Australian Academy of the Humanities to assume responsibility for a major environmental study.
— the Botany Bay Project. Both these projects were being carried through by the end of the report year, and two further major projects were under consideration.

It remains Academy policy to provide what assistance it can to scholarly journals and towards the publication of research by social scientists. It also provides financial assistance for the organisation of specialised conferences and seminars. For some years past research grants to individual scholars have been confined to travel grants to those undertaking research in the countries of South East Asia and the Pacific. This policy seems the more appropriate since the establishment in 1965 of the Australian Research Grants Committee, which makes grants to individual or group projects but does not normally provide for travel outside Australia.

A new development which is increasing in significance is the recent collaboration with the Australian Academy of the Humanities and the Australian Academy of Science in promoting studies on matters of common interest.

In financing research projects the Academy has to look to outside sources such as foundations, statutory bodies and business firms. Its success in this field has been helped by the decision of the Australian Government in August 1964 to grant exemption from income tax on gifts to the Academy for research purposes. However, donations for other important activities, such as the dissemination of scientific knowledge, do not qualify for such a concession. The Academy has sought, so far unsuccessfully, to be included with those educational and research bodies in whose cases a donation does not have to be specifically for research to be accepted as an income tax deduction.

In the ten years 1964-1974 the Academy spent approximately $47,000 from its own resources on research projects. This cash contribution was additional to the administrative costs of initial planning and supervision, which included travel and accommodation expenses of its Fellows from all parts of Australia. All professional services by Fellows to Academy projects have been provided without fee or charge other than travel and accommodation costs.
ANNUAL REPORT FOR 1975-76

MAJOR RESEARCH PROJECTS

Taxation in Australia: The Academy-sponsored study of taxation produced a further important book — Downing, Arndt, Boxer and Mathews: Taxation in Australia: Agenda for Reform (M.U.P.) 1964 — the year in which a major study of Aborigines was launched.

The Aborigines Project: In June 1970 an agreement was made with the Australian National University Press for the publication of some dozen or so volumes in a series entitled Aborigines in Australian Society. The Academy paid a subsidy of $4,000 towards the publication of the series and authors generously agreed to waive claims to royalties on the first printing. The first five volumes appeared late in 1970, and the Project was completed with publication of the thirteenth volume in early 1976. Authors and titles are:

1. F. Lancaster Jones: The Structure and Growth of Australia's Aboriginal Population;
2. R. Taft, J. L. M. Dawson and P. H. Beasley: Attitudes and Social Conditions;
3. J. P. M. Long: Aboriginal Settlements;
4. C. D. Rowley: The Destruction of Aboriginal Society;
5. H. P. Schapper: Aboriginal Advancement to Integration;
6. C. D. Rowley: Outcasts in White Australia;
7. C. D. Rowley: The Remote Aborigines;
8. Fay Gale; Urban Aborigines;
9. Peter M. Moodie: Aboriginal Health;
(10) Leonard Broom and F. Lancaster Jones: A Blanket a Year;
(11) Frank Stevens: Aborigines in the Northern Territory Cattle Industry;
(12) Hazel M. Smith and Ellen H. Biddle: Look Forward, Not Back;
(13) Elizabeth Eggleston: Fear, Favour or Affection.

As this Project approached completion, publication costs rose far above levels which could have been anticipated in planning the Project. The Academy records its thanks to the Council for Aborignal Affairs and the Department of Aboriginal Affairs for providing subsidies amounting in all to $8,125 towards publication of eight of these volumes.

The Immigration Project. This project began late in 1967 with the object of assessing the impact of immigrants upon Australian society since World War II, studying problems which they have been faced with in Australia. The project has had substantial support from the Commonwealth Department of Immigration, the Australian Research Grants Committee, the Reserve Bank of Australia, the Broken Hill Proprietary Company and a number of other business firms. One of the major contributions came from the Academy itself. A list of main contributors is shown in the Annual Report 1971-72 (page 13). In all, some $150,000 has been devoted to the project without counting the contributions made by Dr. I. H. Burnley, Dr. E. F. Kunz and Dr. C. A. Price of the Department of Demography, Australian National University, which have flowed from the department's research programme. These have received no financial support from the Project itself, nor has the study of British Immigrants and Australia by Dr. Alan Richardson of the University of Western Australia, published by the Australian National University Press in 1974.

The procedure most commonly followed in carrying out the programme has been to enter into contracts with individual scholars already engaged in immigration studies. A list of these, together with grants made, appeared in the Annual Report 1971-72 (page 14). Most of the research has been completed, and publication by A.N.U. Press is proceeding. Five volumes in the series Immigrants in Australia have now appeared:

The results of other studies have appeared in journal articles. Reprints of these articles which form an Academy series of Studies on Post-War Immigration are available from the Academy. The series to 30 June, 1975 comprises:

No. 1—Migrants – A study based on the Survey of Living Conditions in Melbourne 1966 (a chapter of the book People in Poverty)

Jean McCaughey

No. 2—The Current Status of Former Jewish Refugees in Melbourne (Australia and New Zealand Journal of Sociology, April 1970)

Ronald Taft and John Goldlust

No. 3—National Background and Choice of Tertiary Education in Victoria (International Migration, August, 1971)

R. Taft, Patricia Strong and P. J. Fensham

Moira Salter

During the year the Department of Demography, Australian National University, published The Demography of Post-war Immigration. Part 2 of this publication is the work of Dr. J. Martin and Mr. H. F. Willcock, produced as part of the Survey of the Educational Experiences of Children of Non-English-speaking Origin.

Two Fellows of the Academy, Professor A. T. Appleyard and Dr. C. A. Price, have been honorary Directors of this Project since its inception. Much of the work is still to be published. The following books are expected to appear in the next two years. (At this stage many of the titles must be tentative.):

Moira Salter: Professional Migrants since 1960.

E. Isaacs: Greek Families and their Children in Redfern, Sydney.

Rachel Unikowski: Immigrant Communities in Melbourne.

Ian Burnley: Immigrant Populations in Metropolitan Australia.

C. A. Price (ed.): Refugees in Australia.

J. J. Quilkey: Immigrants in the Automobile Industry.
K. Rogers: Migrant Adolescents in Sydney.
E. F. Kunz: Displaced Persons in Australia.

The Project Committee intends, if possible, to commission two “review” volumes when these works have been published. One would be concerned with the social, and the other with the economic, effects on the Australian community of post-war immigration.

Studies in the Education of Migrant Children. In August 1972 the Academy received a request from Dr. S. S. Richardson, Chairman of the Immigration Advisory Council’s Committee on Migrant Education, to sponsor “research into various aspects of the migrant education programme”. The Academy agreed “subject to funds being available and to satisfactory arrangements being made to carry out the work”. Dr. Richardson, Professor W. F. Connell and Professor J. Zubrzycki were added to the Immigration Project Committee, which set up a sub-committee with Professor Zubrzycki as convener, to design suitable research projects. Three projects were recommended by the sub-committee, endorsed by the Project Committee and approved by the Executive Committee. Professor R. Taft offered to undertake a study of The Adjustment of Immigrant School Children, Professor Jean Martin a Survey of the Educational Experiences of Children of non-English-speaking Origin, and Dr. W. C. Radford, of the Australian Council for Educational Research, the Development of Tests and other 'Instruments' for Use in Schools.

It was agreed that A.C.E.R. should approach the Department of Education directly for its funds. It was estimated that the two projects to be sponsored and managed by the Academy would require $47,000 and $57,000 respectively; and both sums were made available by the Department of Immigration.

In January 1974 Dr. J. M. Abela was appointed Research Fellow of Monash University to work under the general supervision of Professor Taft, to study the adjustment of newly arrived migrant children.

This study has involved work with 100 families – 45 from South America, 45 from Britain, and 10 from Malta. By June 1976, in the final round of interviews, the South American parents and children were being interviewed for the third time, the others for the second time. It is expected that data will be processed and the report completed by mid-1977.
In April 1974 arrangements were made with Mr. P. Meade, Lecturer in Education, University of New South Wales (with the approval of his Department and University) to act in a part-time capacity as Field Supervisor of a research programme in Sydney, under the supervision of Dr. Martin. An extensive programme of home interviews was commenced in 1974. On the recommendation of the Immigration Project Committee and the Migrant Education Sub-Committee, further finance was provided by the Australian Department of Education for a programme of home interviews.

By June 1976, coding of data from school and parent interviews was being carried on with assistance from the Bureau of Statistics, and the third round of school tests was about to commence. With a sample of 3,000 children, progressing through three years of the upper secondary schools, this was likely, with the work of Professor Taft and Dr. Abela, to shed considerable light on the problems faced by non-English-speaking children in Australian schools.

The research of Mr. H. F. Willcock, referred to in the 1974-75 Report (p. 16), was completed in August 1975. The bibliographical work has been published, with an introductory essay by Dr. J. Martin, as Part Two of The Demography of Post-War Immigration, referred to above.

The monographs resulting from the Migrant Child Education Project will be published in the series Immigrants in Australia.

A Survey of Australian Economics: A panel had for some time been considering the need for “State of the Art” survey reports of Australian economic studies. At the time of the November 1975 meetings it established a committee of Mr. Alan Boxer (Convener), the President, Professor H. Arndt and Dr. M. Neutze, to secure financial support, to select authors and to organise publication of a series of articles surveying Australian economic studies and the relevant overseas literature.

By the end of June, $9,000 had been received from private firms, and the first series of articles commissioned. Discussion of the most suitable channels of publication had begun.

Survey of Vietnamese Refugees: This survey had its beginning in an approach by the Prime Minister to Dr. J. Martin in August 1975. Subsequently the President was approached by the Department of Labor and Immigration, requesting that the Academy take over the "general direction" of a "longitudinal survey" of the process of Vietnamese resettlement in Australia. The Academy accepted and an initial sum of $30,000 was to be provided, $20,000 of which was received from the Australian Government. Dr. Martin recruited two field research workers, Miss Susan Sue-Tin, and Mrs. Kim-Huong Vu. A study of 500 Vietnamese people was under way by the end of August 1975.

However, in February 1976, without notice to the Academy or the research workers, or to the Vietnamese people whose co-operation with the work had been established, and without official statement or apology, the Australian Government withdrew its support. The first news of this reached the Academy through the press. A letter of protest was sent to the Minister for Immigration and Ethnic Affairs and to the Prime Minister by the President; and a letter of protest by Dr. Martin to the Minister for Immigration and Ethnic Affairs.

It is hoped that Dr. Martin, with the assistance of Mrs. Vu and Miss Sue-Tin, will be able to salvage some of the results of the considerable survey work already undertaken. These two scholars had given up other commitments to engage in this employment. The Academy regrets the discourtesy and the lack of consideration of their situation.

_Botany Bay Project:_ The Annual Report for 1971-72 (page 22) recorded the growth of co-operation between the three Academies, and their interest in sponsoring a joint research project into pollution of the environment, taking Botany Bay as a case study. This had been agreed in principle in 1971; and during 1972 the Consultative Committee appointed a Joint Project Committee to design the Project and carry out the detailed planning. In January 1973 the three Academies approached the Prime Minister, the Minister for the Environment and the Minister for Science, and obtained a promise of $1,030,000 for the Project. The Academy of the Social Sciences obtained from an outside source a grant of $35,000 for related economic studies.

Professor N. G. Butlin took up duty as full-time Director of this Project from January 1974. At the end of that year, for reasons stated in the 1974-75 Report (page 16), the base for the Project was moved from Sydney to the Australian National University, Canberra.

A small Project Committee was appointed and the work was carried on with the generous support of the University. Funds were made available to complete monographs already in preparation.
By the end of the report year the first research monograph of this project, Sydney's Environmental Amenity 1970-75: A Study of the System of Waste Management and Pollution Control was with the printer, and was expected to be published by Australian National University Press in September or October 1976.

Also with the Press was:—

(Ed.) N. G. Butlin: Industrial Activity and Pollution Potential in Sydney.

Other volumes in the series will be:—

(Ed.) N. G Butlin: Urban Environmental Disturbance: the Impact of Port Botany;

Christopher Joy: Water Resources and Water Quality Control in Sydney;

Ian Burnley: Health, Pollution and the Sydney Environment;

Dan Coward: Sydney's Environmental Policy 1870-1970.

In addition three working papers were with the Press:—

(1) Pam Coward: Sydney's Environmental Law;

(3) W. Ryder: Air Pollution Control in Sydney.

A further working paper will be:

M. Johnson: The Quality of Sydney's Ground Water.

INDIVIDUAL RESEARCH GRANTS

For some years past the Academy has ceased to invite applications for research grants from scholars in the social sciences except in two special cases. These special cases are (a) projects that would contribute to a major research project sponsored by the Academy itself; (b) those that are related to the countries of South East Asia and the Pacific.

Since the Australian Research Grants Committee was established in 1965 the Academy has not felt the same need to support research workers throughout the social sciences. It will be noted that many of the studies embraced within the Immigration Project have been supported by research grants. The intention is to limit future awards (as a general rule) to research projects which contribute to the Academy's major programmes.
ASIAN AND PACIFIC RESEARCH TRAVEL GRANTS

For an outline of the history of these grants, see the 1974-75 Report, pages 17-18. Because of the effects of inflation on Academy resources no offer of these grants were made for 1976.

ASSISTANCE TO SCHOLARLY JOURNALS

The policy of subsidising scholarly journals, especially in their early years, has been in operation for at least twenty years past. A survey of the views of members carried out in 1967 showed that a great majority were in favour of this use of resources.

In the 1970s, however, the problem has been one of survival for existing journals. The Academy lacked the resources to offer effective assistance on the scale required. In the 1975-76 financial year, costs of publication and distribution rose so rapidly that the main effort of the Academy has been in approaches to government (on behalf of all three Academies) for financial assistance to journals of established scholarship. An account of representations made during 1974-75 was given in the Report for that year (page 19).

In July 1975 the Special Minister of State referred to the Industries Assistance Commission the question of "whether assistance should be accorded publishing in Australia, and if so what should be the nature and extent of such assistance". The IAC was instructed to "have regard to the desire of the Government that... the publication of works of exceptional merit or of national importance and of works necessary to fulfil special needs should not necessarily be prevented by their being not commercially viable...". The Director was informed that following this reference, Cabinet did not consider submissions which had been prepared, apparently requesting a fund of $1 million for this purpose.

In September 1975 this Academy and the Academy of the Humanities made a brief survey which illustrated the continuing escalation of publishing costs of journals. The results were made known to a meeting of an Inter-Departmental Committee, chaired by the Director of the Australian Government Publishing Service, and charged with investigating the need for assistance, formulating a submission to the IAC inquiry, and with advising government "on an interim programme of assistance for publications in imminent danger of collapse". The Director represented the President, who is Chairman of the Consultative Committee of the three Academies. A second meeting was held early in 1976. The Committee did not meet again.

However, a submission was made by the Academy to the Industries Assistance Commission. As at 30 June 1976 the Academy had not been called to give further evidence.

The Academy had also become involved in efforts to expedite the delivery of overseas journals into Australia.

Following a discussion in the December 1975 meeting of the Consultative Committee of the three Academies, it was decided to approach the Postmaster-General and the Director-General of the National Library. The latter suggested that the Academies prepare a "core list" of journals which should be despatched to Australia by air. The Executive Committee of the Academy decided that each member should be asked to forward to his Panel Chairman titles of overseas journals which he considered should be brought to Australia by air. Panel Chairmen were asked to prepare and forward consolidated lists.

This was the stage reached by June 1976. The Postmaster-General's response to the approach from the Academies was to suggest that where delays in receipt of a journal from overseas occurred, the envelope or wrapping be forwarded to his office so that an investigation could be made.

MEMBERSHIP

The Rules of the Academy state that "persons who are deemed to have achieved distinction in one or more branches of the social sciences may be elected as Fellows of the Academy if (i) they are nominated by one Fellow and seconded by two other Fellows and (ii) they are recommended by the Membership Committee after investigation of their eligibility and (iii) they receive the support of a majority of the Fellows for the time being at a postal ballot".

Twelve new Fellows were elected in 1975. They were: Professor D. A. Aitken (Macquarie University); Mr. A. H. Boxer (Department of the Treasury); Professor T. Brennan (University of Sydney); Professor J. L. Dillon (University of New England); Professor J. McB. Grant (University of Tasmania); Professor C. Howard (University of Melbourne); Dr. K. S. Inglis (Australian National University); Professor R. M. Keesing (Australian National University); Professor D. A. Low (Australian National University); Dr. T. G. McGee (Australian National University); Professor L. Mann (Flinders University); Professor R. F. Over (University of Queensland).

Two distinguished Fellows of the Academy, Professors Sir John Crawford and Julius Stone, were elected as Honorary Fellows.

In June 1975 there were 141 Fellows, including nine Honorary and five Overseas Fellows. It had been decided to elect from 12 to 15 Fellows in 1976, and preparations for the postal ballot were being made by the end of June.

The deaths occurred in 1975-76 of two distinguished former Presidents of the Academy. Dr. K. S. Cunningham was the foundation President from 1943 to 1952. Professor R. I. Downing was President from 1969 to 1972.

RESEARCH PANELS

The stimulation of research requires a professional secretariat and active participation by the Fellows in planning and organising research projects. It was for this reason that the Academy, in November 1970, resolved to organise its members into four Research Panels in which related disciplines are grouped together. Thus Panel A includes Anthropology, Demography, Geography, Sociology and Linguistics; Panel B, Economics, Economic History and Business Administration; Panel C, History, Law, Political Science and Social Philosophy; Panel D, Education and Psychology.

The panels meet annually before the general meeting of the Academy in November. While their main function is to suggest and discuss research projects which may be sponsored by the Academy, they also have the important role of drawing the attention of the Academy to scholars in their disciplines who should be considered for election as Fellows. Each of the panels elects a committee to manage its affairs between annual meetings, and in particular to give detailed consideration to research proposals and nominations for election to the Academy. The Director is ex officio secretary of each panel committee. The panels report directly to the Academy and may also make reports and recommendations to the Executive Committee.
Panel Committees elected in November 1975 are:

Panel A: Professor J. C. Caldwell (Chairman), Professor W. D. Borrie, Professor T. Brennan, Professor J. D. Freeman, Professor M. I. Logan.

Panel B: Professor K. J. Hancock (Chairman), Mr. A. H. Boxer, Professor F. H. G. Gruen, Professor G. C. Harcourt, Professor J. W. Nevile, Professor J. O. N. Perkins, Professor G. S. L. Tucker.

Panel C: Emeritus Professor N. D. Harper (Chairman), Professor E. Campbell, Professor D. H. Monro, Professor R. S. Parker, Professor O. H. K. Spate.

Panel D: Professor N. D. Feather (Chairman), Professor R. H. Day, Professor S. S. Dunn, Professor P. H. Glow, Professor R. W. Russell, Professor A. T. Welford.

PLANNING RESEARCH PROJECTS

Among major activities of the Academy, advanced significantly by the work of the panels, are to fix priorities for research, to examine the feasibility of projects of high priority, to make the initial plans, and to obtain finance. Limited resources make it necessary so to manage initial studies that each one forms a minor project, worthwhile in itself.

A good example is the Academy’s present concern with a study of the professions in Australia, arising originally from discussions in Panel C; and taking shape in discussions in the other panels, in the Annual General Meeting, in the Executive Committee, and in a special committee convened by Professor L. Broom. Subsequently a small working party, convened by Dr. Allan Martin, recommended that a comprehensive bibliography of Australian data be prepared, and that a symposium be organised.

The Bibliography on the Professions in Australia is now in draft form. It has been circulated widely to professional organisations, to interested university departments and to individuals working in this field, for comment and correction. A considerable amount of additional data, and of corrections, has been received.

A symposium on the Professions has been organised for October 1976. One purpose of this is to help the Annual General Meeting decide whether a major research project is desirable and feasible.
Another example of the process is a draft plan for a study of the problems of ageing, arising from discussions in Panel D, and drawn up by Professor A. T. Welford. The research plan has been discussed by Professor Welford with the Department of Social Security. It appears that the Department may be able to contribute enough financial support for a beginning to be made. Two members of the research team, which will work in Adelaide if a start is made, are available from Professor Welford's department.

As at the end of the 1975-76 financial year, however, any projected major research plan was in jeopardy because of the reductions in government spending.

These and other possible projects will be considered by the Standing Research Committee in November 1976.

CONSULTATIVE COMMITTEE OF THE ACADEMIES OF SCIENCE, OF THE HUMANITIES AND OF THE SOCIAL SCIENCES

The growth of inter-Academy co-operation has been outlined in previous Annual Reports. One result of this process (long delayed by changes in the management of the publishing firm) was the publication of N. J. Firth and G. Sawyer (eds.): The Murray Waters. Angus and Robertson, 1974.

Co-operation has been facilitated by the meetings of the Consultative Committee. The Committee has a general supervisory responsibility for the Botany Bay Project. As this project approaches the stage of publication of results the Committee has begun to consider the possibility of co-operation in another research programme. This trend seems likely to continue, as advances in the various disciplines make more obvious the essential unity of science.

Areas for common action in 1975-76, as in 1974-75, included approaches to the Australian Government for assistance to scholarly journals in the face of inflation, and the withdrawal of postal concessions and of the printing subsidy. Representations continue about long delays in the receipt of scientific publications from overseas.

THE ANNUAL ACADEMY LECTURE

The fourth of these lectures, on 4 November 1975, was given by Professor Eugene Kamenka, Professor of the History of Ideas, Australian National University. The fifth is to be given on 2 November 1976 by Professor G. N. Blainey, Ernest Scott Professor of History, University of Melbourne.

ACADEMY AWARDS

No recommendations for the Junior or the Senior Award were made in 1975-76.

PROPOSED ACADEMY JOURNAL

The proposal for an Academy Journal has been allowed to lapse, partly because of the obvious difficulty of establishing a successful periodical publication at the present time.

OTHER MATTERS

(a) Finance

The main problem faced in 1975-76 was inflation which greatly increased costs of administration, and of travel to meetings, and which placed plans for development of major projects in doubt. The Immigration Project Committee, faced with costs of a major publication programme, was being forced to consider cheaper methods of publication for the series Immigrants in Australia. It has proved impossible to continue the Asian and Pacific Research Travel Grants. The Annual General Meeting in November 1975 decided:

(i) that the Academy could no longer pay accommodation costs involved in attendance at the Annual Meetings; and
(ii) that the Finance Committee be authorised to raise membership fees for 1976-77.

(b) International Activities

It was decided that the Academy should offer co-sponsorship of the Extraordinary World Congress of the International Association for Philosophy of Law and Social Philosophy, to be held in Sydney and Canberra in August 1977.

Discussions were held with Dr. Milton Osborne, Director of the British Institute in Singapore, on the possibility of the Academy contributing to this Institute, which has been established by the British Academy partly to assist scholars visiting the region.
The Executive Committee approved an approach to the Government, separately from the budget approach, for assistance to participate in this and other international social science activities, such as membership of the Standing Committee for Co-operation with National Social Science Councils, established by the International Social Science Council.

(c) CSIRO

On 22 August 1975 the Academy's Executive Committee had an exploratory discussion with scientists of the CSIRO, both parties being interested in future exchanges to promote the social sciences. The CSIRO has for some time recruited social scientists for certain of its programmes (such as land use studies).

(d) The Committee on Mathematics in the Social Sciences

G. H. Cooney: The Mathematical Background of Students in Social Science Disciplines, referred to in the 1974-75 Report, was in process of publication.
