THE ACADEMY

The Academy of the Social Sciences in Australia (prior to July 1971 the Social Sciences Research Council of Australia) is a corporate body of social scientists. Each member, on election by the Academy, takes the title of Fellow. For the origins and development of the Academy, see the 1975-76 (or an earlier) Annual Report, and K. S. Cunningham: The Social Science Research Council of Australia 1942-1952, SSRC, Canberra, 1967.

The functions of the Academy are: —

(i) to encourage the advancement of the social sciences in Australia;
(ii) to act as a co-ordinating group for the promotion of research and teaching in the social sciences;
(iii) to foster research and to subsidise the publication of studies in the social sciences;
(iv) to encourage and assist in the formation of other national associations or institutions for the promotion of the social sciences or any branch of them;
(v) to act as the Australian national member of international organisations connected with social sciences; and
(vi) to act as a consultant and adviser in regard to the social sciences.

As at 30 June 1978 there were one hundred and sixty three Fellows of the Academy. New Fellows are elected by postal ballot on the recommendation of the Membership Committee. The Academy’s functions are discharged by the Executive Committee, which consists of the President, the Secretary, the Treasurer and seven other members, all elected at the Annual General Meeting. All committees and office bearers are responsible to the Annual General Meeting.

The Australian Government has, since 1953, provided an annual grant to assist the Academy to meet administrative and travel costs. In 1977-78 the grant was $52,000, $2,250 of which was for the Academy’s international activities.

As social change accelerates in Australia, the role of an interdisciplinary social science research organisation, independent of governments, becomes more critical. To identify areas where research is urgently required, the Academy has organised its Fellows into four research panels, grouping together the more closely related disciplines mainly for this purpose. Panel A includes Fellows from the disciplines of Anthropology, Demography, Geography, Sociology and Linguistics: Panel B, Economics, Economic History and Business Administration: Panel C, History, Law, Political Science and Social Philosophy: Panel D, Education and Psychology.

In general, the more socially significant the problem facing social scientists, the more improbable the possibility of achieving precise conclusions. The classifications of data and the frames of reference cannot approach the exactness, nor offer the hopes of truthful prediction, which those in the "hard" sciences do. "Particularly in social studies do we take our vocabulary from the field of study itself. Thus the valuations of the market place and of the political arena are carried unobtrusively into scientific analysis".1

The increasing urgency of problems arising from rapid social change has been a factor in the Academy’s decision to concentrate its resources mainly upon major research projects, to clarify issues and to facilitate policy making. The closer association of Fellows into the four panels (see above) has proved advantageous for research planning. The projects have tended to be interdisciplinary, with each discipline through its own methods contributing its particular concepts and data. An interesting contrast has been the current Survey of Australian Economics organized within Panel B, which is concerned with a purely economic analysis of problem areas in Australian society. Two studies which could develop into major projects, of Professions in Australia and Youth Unemployment, have made little progress to that end during 1977-78, for lack of adequate financial support. At the end of the Report year, however, Academy working parties were maintaining their studies of both problems.

For financing research projects the Academy has to look to outside sources such as foundations, statutory bodies and business firms. Its efforts to this end have been helped by the decision of the Australian Government in August 1964 to grant exemption from income tax on gifts to the Academy for research purposes. However, donations for other important activities, such as the dissemination of scientific knowledge, do not qualify for such a concession. The Academy has sought, so far unsuccessfully, to be included with those education and research bodies in whose cases a donation does not have to be specifically for research to be accepted as an income tax deduction.

The claim of the physical sciences to government support has been obvious, because a disciplined study of disciplined data has so obviously been profitable. Pursuit of the social sciences involves "disciplined research" but into "undisciplined problems".2 i.e. those arising from partly unpredictable human relationships. These are ever more clearly the major problems for Australia and the world. The identification of the social questions for which "approximate answers" can be sought, and the search for those answers, remains the central task of the Academy.

The Academy has established formal links with international bodies with similar objectives. During 1977-78 it became a member of the Standing Committee for Co-operation with National Social Science Councils, a body closely associated with the International Social Science Council; and the Asian Association of Social Science Research Councils.

The Academy has completed three major research projects: Women in Australia, Taxation in Australia and Aborigines in Australian Society. Eight volumes of Immigrants in Australia, the findings from the Immigration Project, had been published by the end of the Report year (30 June 1978). The two works published in 1978 (both by Australian National University Press) were M. J. Salter: Studies in the Immigration of the Highly Skilled; and Rachel Unikoski: Communal Endeavours. Migrant Organizations in Melbourne. A study of the economic behaviour of migrant households by J. J. Nightingale was in press. Scripts by Ian Burnley (Immigration Population in Metropolitan Australia) and J. J. Quilkey (Immigrants in the Automobile Industry) had been received and were being read. Whether or not the results of this project are to be assessed in a twelfth (review) volume remained a matter for discussion. However, the project’s Publication Subcommittee had been discussing with Professor D. A. Aitkin the possibility of a volume on the part played by migrants in Australian politics since the second world war.

It had been intended that volumes resulting from a closely associated project, Studies in the Education of Migrant Children would be published in the Immigrants in Australia series. However, after discussion with the Commonwealth Department of Education, the first study by Professor R. Taft, The Adjustment of Immigrant School Children, is to be published by that Department and the Australian Government Publishing Service. Dr Jean Martin’s Survey of the Educational Experiences of Children of non-English-speaking origin, in which she is being assisted by Dr. P. Meade of the University of New South Wales, is to be published in two volumes.

Field work involved in The Survey of Vietnamese Refugees by Dr Jean Martin has been completed. Dr Martin intends to undertake, in 1978-79, a further study of the situation of Vietnamese refugees in France and North America.

In The Survey of Australian Economics (see p. 7 of the 1976-77 Report) nine scripts had been received from the authors; and it had been decided that the director of this project and editor of both volumes, Professor F. H. G. Gruen, should contribute the concluding chapter. Page proofs of volume one had been corrected by 30 June 1978: and it was to be launched at the Conference of Economists at Macquarie University in September 1978. The costs of this project were met by contributions from the Reserve Bank of Australia and from private enterprise.

Little progress was made during the year with the Study of the Professions in Australia. Of the working papers referred to in the previous Report, those on Law, Medicine, Education and Administration had been received. One further paper, on Social Work, was expected. Mr S. S. Dunn, who was responsible for the necessary briefings at the meeting of the expert working party in March 1977, suggested that the five papers be assessed, and that a meeting with Adelaide members of the Academy and the working party be arranged for September 1978 to recommend on the advisability of a major project. The history of this project illustrates both the limits and the possibilities of work which can be done on an important social science problem where financial support is minimal. The way has been prepared for a major project at a later stage. In the meantime, the papers in preparation could well form the main core of a useful publication on the professions.

A study of Youth Unemployment was also initiated with a working party, convened by Professor R. F. Henderson. The main activity so far has been a symposium, held in November 1977, attended by interested members of the Academy and others invited to contribute. The papers presented, with the reports of five symposium committees, were edited by Professor Henderson and published early in 1978 (ed. R. F. Henderson: Youth Unemployment). At a meeting of the working party held in February 1978 Professor F. H. G. Gruen took over the duties of Convenor from Professor Henderson.

The Botany Bay Project was jointly initiated and sponsored by the Academies of Science, of the Humanities and of the Social Sciences. (For details, see the Report for 1975-76 pp. 16-17). A further publication during 1977-78 has been: — C. Joy, W. Hickson and M. Buchanan: Liquid Waste Management. In press at the end of the year was: — Merika Johnson: Ground Water Quality. A further script almost completed was: — Don Coward: A History of Environmental Policy.

FELLOWS OF THE ACADEMY

The Rules of the Academy state that “persons who are deemed to have achieved distinction in one or more branches of the social sciences may be elected as Fellows of the Academy if (i) they are nominated by one Fellow and seconded by two other Fellows and (ii) they are recommended by the Membership Committee after investigation of their eligibility and (iii) they receive the support of a majority of the Fellows for the time being at a postal ballot”.

Thirteen new Fellows were elected in 1977. They were: Professor V. E. Argy, Macquarie University; Professor P. F. Bourke, Flinders University; Professor H. C. Brookfield, University of Melbourne; Dr A. Capell, University of Sydney; Professor W. M. Corden, Australian National University; Professor H. A. J. Ford, University of Melbourne; Dr J. P. Keeves, Australian Council for Educational Research; Dr P. Loveday, Australian National University; Dr Marie O. Reay, Australian National University; Professor W. A. Scott, Australian National University; Professor P. L. Waller, Monash University; Professor D. H. Whitehead, La Trobe University; Professor F. K. Wright, University of Melbourne.

In June 1978 there were 163 Fellows, including ten Honorary and six Overseas Fellows. It had been decided that up to ten names should be submitted to the postal ballot for election to Fellowship in 1978. The Membership Committee subsequently decided to submit nine names to the ballot.
With the death of Emeritus Professor Sydney James Butlin during the year, the Academy has lost a former President (1958-1962) and one of its most distinguished Fellows.

Appreciation:
Syd Butlin was one of the finest Australian scholars of the period since the Second World War and as well was for a large part of that time a leading administrator in the University of Sydney. When he returned from the Department of War Organisation of Industry at the age of 33 to take up the responsibilities of a professor of economics, the University of Sydney was on the brink of dramatic change. He was to bear the main administrative responsibility for coping with the flood of ex-servicemen into economics courses at the end of the war and then for creating a faculty structure suited to the enlarged scale of the University. As Dean of the Faculty of Economics for ten years after the end of the War, he became one of the most important decision-makers in the University as a whole. In a second ten-year term as Dean commencing in the late 1950s, he then presided over the expansion of his faculty made possible by governmental acceptance of responsibility for higher levels of funding of Australian universities. When he eventually moved to a chair of economic history at the Australian National University in 1971, he left behind him a record of administration at Sydney spanning a quarter of a century.

At the same time, he was making a contribution to the writing of Australian economic history with which only one other in the period since the Second World War, that of his brother Noel, can be mentioned in the same breath. His Foundations of the Australian Monetary System 1788-1851 appeared during his first period of the deanship and received the accolade of a doctorate of letters from Cambridge University. This book, together with his subsequent history of the A.N.Z. Bank, represented a major innovation in historical writing in Australia. The two books not only focussed attention on monetary history at a level of economic sophistication and factual detail not previously known in Australia but they also depicted the history of financial institutions as part of a general process of economic change. Although most scholars would be more than happy to do no more than write two such books in their life-time, for Syd Butlin, as can be seen from the above list of his publications, they were part of a larger whole. He wrote the first volume of the official history of the Australian economy in the Second World War and was co-author of the second volume which was published soon after his death. He also promoted continuing research into Australian financial history by making available many of the relevant long-term statistical series in a published form. In addition, a constant stream of journal articles and other publications flowed from him throughout his career at Sydney. The completion of two further books on Australian monetary history was cut short by his death, although some parts of this work were left in a form which may yet permit their publication.

Syd Butlin demonstrated a remarkable capacity to immerse himself in administrative detail and yet still complete a larger programme of writing and research. But the latter was his first love and it permeated all his other academic activities. Because of his natural reticence, it would be difficult for any one person to account for the full range of his contribution to Australian intellectual life. However, one of many examples which could be given of the way he used his administrative skills in the furtherance of scholarship is his close association with Sydney University Press from its inception. Another, perhaps less well-known, is the part he played in establishing the Australian Economic History Review on a sound basis. These sorts of activities indicate his general concern not only to pursue his own scholarly ends but to create the conditions for others to follow his example. The Academy has lost one of its longest serving Fellows and the community of scholars one of its staunchest supporters.

PANELS

Panel Chairmen and Committees are elected at the annual meetings of each Panel. Those elected in November 1977 were: —

Panel A: Professors J. Zubrzycki (Chairman), T. Brennan, J. D. Freeman, M. I. Logan and Dr C. A. Price.

Panel C: Mr S. I. Benn (Chairman), Professors D. A. Aitkin, P. Bourke, O. H. K. Spate and L. C. F. Turner. (Professor H. A. J. Ford was later co-opted).

Panel D: Professors D. Spearritt (Chairman), R. A. Champion, Mr S. S. Dunn, Professors N. T. Feather, S. H. Lovibond and J. P. Sutcliffe.
CONSULTATIVE COMMITTEE OF THE ACADEMIES OF THE HUMANITIES, OF SCIENCE AND OF THE SOCIAL SCIENCES

Previous reports have indicated the purpose of this Committee. There was no formal meeting during 1977-78, but a close and cordial relationship between the three Academies was maintained. The Academy expresses its gratitude to the Australian Academy of Science for use of its meeting facilities: and to the Australian Academy of the Humanities for continuation of informal administrative assistance.

GOVERNMENT GRANTS

This Academy’s activities depend mainly on its receipts of grants in aid. By far the most important source has been the Australian Government. The total government grant for 1977-78 was $52,000, $49,750 specifically for general administrative costs and $2,250 for “membership and representation on the Conference of National Social Science Councils and the Asian Association of Social Science Research Councils”.

ANNUAL LECTURE

The Academy’s Annual Lecture for 1977 was given in the Coombs Lecture Theatre, Australian National University, Canberra on 8 November 1977, by Professor O. H. K. Spate. The topic was Plus ça change . . . ? Some Problems of the Sixteenth and Twentieth Centuries.

INTERNATIONAL ACTIVITIES

In October 1977 the President, Professor F. H. G. Gruen, attended meetings of the International Social Science Council, and of the Standing Committee for Co-operation with National Social Science Councils and Analogous Bodies, in Paris. In August 1977 the Director attended a meeting of the Asian Association of Social Science Research Councils, in Seoul.

OTHER MATTERS

(a) Working Party on Natural Hazards. The Academy continued its support to the work of this body. It is convened by Dr R. Wettenhall. Professors R. G. Brown, J. L. Dillon and P. L. Waller represent the Academy.
(b) Academy Policy. At the Executive Committee meeting in February 1978 Dr H. C. Coombs recommended a more active policy of identifying social problems, and of approaches to the government for support of research leading to recommendations for government action. It was agreed that the questions raised should be discussed at the Annual General Meeting in November 1978.
(c) At the May 1978 meeting Professor Ross Day, representing the Australian Research Grants Committee, joined in a discussion of problems common to both organisations. It was agreed that no formal link was desirable or necessary.
(d) During the year the Director continued to represent the Academy on the National Committee for Social Science Teaching.
